Chair’s Report, David Bucek, Chair, announced speaker rules and meeting procedures.

Director’s Report, Robert Williamson, Secretary and Deputy Director for the Planning and Development Department, welcomed attendees to the new year and highlighted key updates. City Council has received public comment on last year’s proposed landmarks and reclassifications, with no opposition, and is expected to vote next week. Staff are developing new internal policies on historic district context areas and siding materials to improve clarity and consistency in reviews. The final draft of the Norhill Design Guidelines is being prepared for HAHC review, incorporating neighborhood feedback. Future monthly reports will include summaries of design review applications and administrative approvals to better reflect staff workload. The report concluded with recognition of staff contributions, including the departure of team member Cara Quigley, and provided contact information for public inquiries.

A. 2025 END-OF-YEAR COA REPORT

Samantha de Leon presents the 2025 end-of-year Certificate of Appropriateness (COA) report, summarizing all COA activity for the year. In 2025, staff reviewed 355 applications. Of these, 39% were approved by the Historic and Archaeological Commission, 32% were administratively approved, 12% were withdrawn, 5% resulted in Certificates of Objection, and only 3% were denied. Staff also completed 54 design reviews.

Applications were received from nearly all historic districts, with the highest number from Houston Heights, Norhill, and Woodland Heights. Most applications involved contributing properties (72%), followed by non-contributing properties (18%) and landmarks or protected landmarks outside historic districts (10%). The Commission reviewed 176 COAs, approving 88%, deferring 9%, and denying 3%, with few appeals and only four overturns.

C. COMMENTS FROM THE PUBLIC –

Virginia Kelsey suggests, before adopting the Norhill guidelines, if possible, could there be a public forum or meeting that would allow HAHC members to visit Norhill and better understand the neighborhood. She notes, while we all understand there are legal requirements for such a visit, she and the neighborhood are willing to offer a proper meeting.

Emily Argon, Preservation Houston has announced its annual awards recognizing outstanding historic preservation projects completed within the last five years. This year there are 16 award winners, selected by an independent jury, including several protected landmarks and contributing buildings in historic districts, many of which were reviewed by the Commission. The speaker highlights that several projects utilized state and federal historic tax credits and mentions a few notable winning projects. The awards will be presented at the Cornerstone Dinner on 27 February, and the full list is available on Preservation

Houston’s website. She also announced this year’s President’s Award will be given to former commissioner Steve Curry for his significant contributions to preservation efforts in Houston.

D. HISTORIC PRESERVATIONS OFFICER’S REPORT –

Yasmine Arslan, Interim Preservation Officer, presents the first Preservation Officer’s Report for 2026. She reports that City Council recently held a public hearing on eight proposed landmark designations and reclassifications, which are scheduled for a final vote at an upcoming Council meeting. Staff is incorporating public feedback into revisions of the Norhill Design Guidelines and plans to hold a special public hearing in March before moving toward adoption later in 2026. She also notes ongoing improvements to the Houston Preservation Tracker, including bug fixes and an upcoming applicant survey. She also recognizes and thanks staff member Cara Quigley for her significant contributions to the preservation program as she departs the office.

E. ADJOURNMENT
